

A Chapter on Each Page

I've been shown all that I could own
If I designed to have it all
To conquer and thrive
A million steps at a time
No strings attached

There's so many fates to explore
To be waiting now
So many tastes that I'm dying to try
A chapter told on each page
There are no cages
I believe in

And now you're stuck in the fray
You've been told too many tales
So tangled in pride
No days are wasted in awe of the shade
And every choice that you'll make
Will pave your escape

I've been told that I would never glow
If I constantly asked for more
Stubborn and proud, I multiply every path
Straying from lights

There's so many fates to explore
I'm so naive to try
So many tastes that will never be mine
Now that I've stretched across lands
I digress, never finding my place
Rambling and spent

Now that I'm stopped in my tracks
I know what to cast aside
Hands untied, I'll try
To abide by straight lines
Now that I'm quiet, with my eyes open wide
Adamance as my guide
I'm hoping to conjure the light
I'm confident with every stride

And now you're stuck in the fray
You've been told too many tales
So tangled in pride
No days are wasted in awe of the shade
And every choice that you'll make
Will pave your escape
