

Declines Are Long Gone

You've loved and now I'm caught in this fight
You've laughed and now I'm stopped in my tracks
You've broken something
You've loved and left no hope in sight
You've laughed and tried to alter the facts
You know we're dying, right?

You've chosen to stall it now
You even told us
"Try this crown, it's enough"
"Declines are long gone"
We've opened our eyes,
You've shattered the skies and seas.
Now, no more blossoms
We've opened our eyes, we now have to fight and cling
To breathable air

You had no map to bestow
Give it time and solve this through ice
And now we need to find all the answers or Choose denial anytime
The air is sculpting a shrine
Where we'll go and face the rapture
Breathe the sovereign doubt
That you won't die in time

Broken sermons die, all empty tides of lies
Flooding our houses with silence

There's no stopping the strides of the reckoning
And in the darkness of my mind
I wish I was somebody strong enough
Realizing the ending

I'd fight all the time
Tell me it's over now
Don't answer now